2. Privacy:
The majority of submissions to committees are published on the internet by a decision of the relevant committee. Committees publish the name of the person making the submission but they take care not to publish the person’s contact details on the world wide web.

If you have a concern about having your name published on the internet or if you wish to make a confidential submission, you may ask the committee to withhold your name or keep your submission confidential. It is, however, the Committee's decision whether or not to publish material submitted to it.

Would you like the Committee to consider:

☐ Making the submission and your name public;

☐ Making the submission public but withholding your name; or

☐ Keeping the submission, or part of it, confidential

Committees prefer to make submissions public (and this normally includes publishing on the web) but will consider requests for confidentiality. The committee is not obliged to accept your requests and if you have any concerns about this you should contact the Committee Secretary before making the submission.

Please provide a reason you with this submission be treated as confidential
